GEO. L. MARR.

Jan. 11, 1861-4f.

Mr. Fessenden said the Senator was determined on a personal quarrel. He could not admit Mr. Douglas to be a gentleman, because he had used in laws of Kentucky; that the act of Congress of 1783-46 the laws of Kentucky; that the daty of the Governor is misserial merely, like that of a Sheriff or Marshal, was to induce the belief that the country is about being plunged into war, by an act of the Administration and inflame the suspicious of the people. He made it a rule in on by an act of Congress to perform such duty, he made in the suspicious of the people.

Dr. Douglas said Mr. Fessenden would be inform-

From the Huntsville (Ala.,) Democrat. Can he Split up his Duty?

[From the Richmond Whig.] The most important paragraph in Mr. Lincoln's

Inaugural is the following:

" The power conferred on me will be used to hold, occupy and possess the property and places belong-ing to the Government; to collect duties and iming to the Government; to collect duties and imposts; but beyond what may be necessary for these objects, there will be no using of force against or among the people snywhere. Where hostility to the United States, in any interior locality, shall be so great and so universal as to prevent competent resident clizens from holding federal offices, there will be not attempt to force observious streams. will be no attempt to force obnoxious strangers among the people for that object. While the strict legal right may exist in the Government to enforce the exercise of these offices, the attempt to do so would be so irritating, and so nearly impracticable withal, that I deem it better to forego, for the time, the uses of such offices. The mails, unless repelled, will continue to be furnished at all points of the Union, so far as possible.

The Cincinnati Enquirer calls special attention to the concluding sentences of this paragraph, and adds that, in them we are told that while the Government "would have a strict legal right to enforce the exercise of certain offices," yet as it would not result in any good, "he deems it better to forego, for the time the use of such offices." Now, we should like to know if he can forego the exercise of strict legal rights in one case, why he cannot in others? Why cannot he, upon the principle laid Get away! get away! get away! Dixis Land! down, cease for a time the exercise of any jurisdic-tion whatever in the secoded States? Can he split up his duty? Does not the same reason of policy, which induces him to "forego for a time the use of certain offices," apply with a thousand-fold more force in the collection of the revenue and the possession and occupation of the forts? Does not his Wheneas, The presence of a military force con-centrated and permanently quartered at the seat of Government, is a departure from all former usage of his official duties, expose the fallacy that he is bound Government, is a departure from all former usage of the Government, and dangerous to the rights and liberties of the people, therefore,
